

FOREIGN REPORT
11 February 1982

● A new deal to exchange the imprisoned Jewish dissident Anatoli Shcharansky for two unnamed Soviet spies imprisoned in western countries may be nearing a conclusion, according to sources in Vienna. The first deal fell through when the western side rejected a Soviet offer requiring Shcharansky to admit that he passed secrets to the American Central Intelligence Agency.